MAKING WHISTLEBLOWING WORK FOR EUROPE

The EU is poised to take a momentous step and adopt a new directive to protect whistleblowers across Europe. This could have a dramatic impact on the capacity and ability of whistleblowing to work in all our interests. We know that protecting those who speak up in the public interest saves lives, protects our environment, reveals and stops corruption, and stems the huge financial losses to business and governments that result from failures to address wrongdoing.

It is vital that an EU Directive on the protection of whistleblowers protects the free flow of information necessary for responsible exercises of institutional authority. This is why we, the undersigned, have come together to urge the EU Council to do the right thing - and adopt the Parliament's position on the reporting channels.

Protecting disclosures made outside the employment relationship is at the heart of providing real whistleblower protection. It must be understood that in doing so:

- It allows law enforcement and regulatory bodies to do their jobs properly;
- It is the vital safety net for protecting the public interest and the public's right to know when organisations are corrupt or fail to take responsibility;
- It ensures employers take seriously their responsibility to make it safe and acceptable to report internally; and
- There is no evidence this undermines internal channels as the genuine first port of call for individuals
- It protects freedom of expression;

As it stands, we are very concerned that the EU is about to agree a directive that will dangerously reinforce the status quo and make it even harder for individuals to report breaches of law and wrongdoing.

It is right that organisations across all sectors are encouraged to take steps that make it easier and safer for those who work with them to report concerns, but it is essential that competent regulatory and law enforcement authorities have access to the information they need to fulfil their mandates. By making it mandatory to report to the employer first - and obligatory to use the channel employers are required to set up with only risky and uncertain exceptions - the directive unwittingly builds in information control systems that will both hamper internal good management and make certain responsible disclosures to competent authorities illegal.

If this mandatory internal disclosure regime stands, the directive will have abandoned responsible Europeans who raise concerns appropriately to their employers through their supervisors or normal management channels of communication, who disclose information to competent authorities who have the power and mandate to address wrongdoing, or who provide information to the journalists who investigate and report in the public interest. They will suffer. Europe will suffer.

We remind the EU institutions, in trilogue negotiations right now, that their promise to better protect whistleblowers across Europe requires taking democratic accountability seriously. Regulatory authorities, governments and businesses across Europe are actively seeking information from those who speak up so that they can better protect and deliver services and protect the rights of the communities they serve.

The EU has a moral and legal responsibility to adopt a directive that builds on the Council of Europe Recommendation and international best practice consensus that protects the voluntary choice of channels for those who disclose wrongdoing.

Thank you for your time in this matter.

Respectfully,

Journalists' Union of Macedonia and Thrace Daily Access Info Europe Newspapers - GREECE Akademikerne, The Danish confederation of National Whistleblower Center professional associations Anti Corruption International News Media Europe APADOR-CH, The Association for the Defence of Oživení o. s. Human Rights in Romania - the Helsinki Panhellenic Federation Unions Journalist Committee PCS, Public and Commercial Services Union APJA. Association of Professional Journalists of Protect Albania Public Services International (PSI) ARTICLE 19 Reporters Without Borders ASEBLAC, Asociación Española de Sujetos Riparte il futuro Obligados en Prevención del Blanqueo de Capitales shoeman.eu/ Associated Whistleblowing Press (AWP) Stefan Batory Foundation Association for Accountancy & Business Affairs, UK Swedish Union of Journalists Association of Hungarian Journalists (MUOSZ) Tax Justice Network Blueprint for Free Speech Tax Justice UK Center for Independent Journalism Tax Research LLP Centre for Free Expression, Ryerson University, TCO, The Swedish Confederation of Professional Toronto, Canada Employees CFDT Cadres, Confédération française The Ethicos Group démocratique du travail Cadres The European Centre for Press and Media Freedom Corporate Europe Observatory Transparency International CREW - Centre for Research on Employment and Transparency International Denmark Work, University of Greenwich Transparency International Estonia Deutscher Journalisten-Verband Transparency International EU EPSU, The European Federation of Public Service Transparency International France Unions Transparency International Greece Estonian Association of Journalists Transparency International Ireland Eurocadres, Council of European Professional and Managerial Staff Transparency International Italia Eurodad, European Network on Debt and Transparency International Latvia (Delna) Development Transparency International Nederland Eurogroup for Animals Transparency International Portugal (TI-PT) European Federation of Journalists Transparency International Romania FABI, Federazione Autonoma Bancari Italiani Transparency International Slovakia FAPE Spain, La Federación de Asociaciones de Transparency International Slovenia Periodistas de España Transparency International Spain FH, Danish Trade Union Confederation UGICT CGT, Union Générale des Ingénieurs, Cadres FIBGAR, Fundación Internacional Baltasar Garzón et Techniciens FNV, Dutch trade union federation Union Journalists' of Turkey

Free Press Unlimited

Government Accountability Project

Hungarian Press Union

Independent Organized Crime Research Network
for Law Enforcement Officers & Academics

Independent Trade Union of Journalists and Media
Workers

UTC-UGT, Unión de Técnicos y Cuadros

VVJ/AVBB, Vlaamse Vereniging van Journalisten

Whistleblower Network Germany
Whistleblowing International Network

Xnet